

LET'S GATHER AROUND...

The circle is the spatial layout of bodies in the act of sharing. Being together means sharing passions, ideas, aims; being together means doing things together. In a tri-dimensional space the circle becomes a cylinder which can contain these activities. A very interesting type of community dwelling can be found in China. These constructions, called Tubou - literally translated as 'earth building' - have a circular shape, to enclose the activities carried out by the inhabitants. The circle can be reproduced and reinterpreted according to the varying needs and requirements of the project. This shape can become a symbol of a community getting together and be universally recognized as the icon of living together.
